

PICK YOUR OWN WEATHER

HOW TO USE BAROMETERS

Barometer and wind are the best indicators of weather for the layman. The Weather Bureau considers the following as a fairly reliable guide. Barometer behavior and wind directions are sketched at left, with interpretations below:

WHAT'S IT GONNA DO? The old topic continues daily, unabated. Between the horizon's rims, however, one can usually scent a nearby storm or fair weather ahead.

When it comes to predicting the weather, amateur weathermen can't compete with the Weather Bureau with its scientific gadgets and widely-gathered data. There are limitations. With close attention to a barometer, clouds and winds, the weatherman himself says that almost anyone can become a short-range weather prophet. Farmers, mariners and flyers long have been able sky-scanners. If you want to pick your own weather during the coming seasons of changeable climate, here are a few things the amateur weatherman should know:

This Week's PICTURE SHOW—AP Newsfeatures.

HOW TO JUDGE THE WINDS

Generally, northwest wind is a precursor of fine, bracing weather. Northeast wind usually indicates heavy rain, often a windstorm. Meteorologists measure the wind, classify it according to speeds which range from "calm" to "hurricane." Here are observations that may be made without instruments. Figures show miles-per-hour.

2 Fresh winds (19-31) sway small trees; strong (32-46) move whole trees, break off twigs.

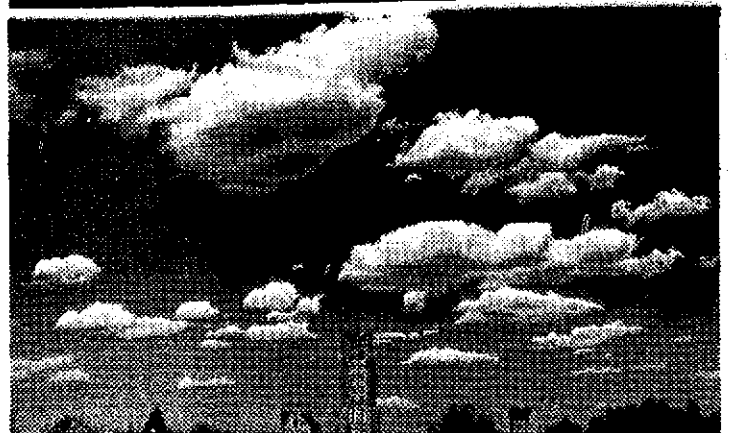

1 Calm, light, gentle and moderate winds range from 1-18 m.p.h. Smoke, moving leaves, branches, flags are signs.

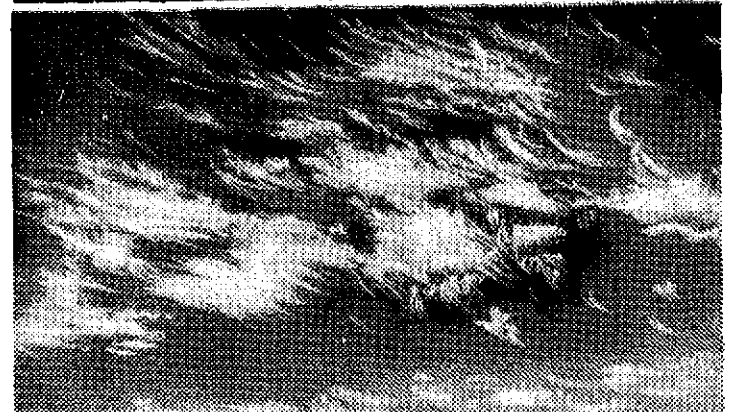

3 Gales (47-54) cause slight damage; whole gales (55-75) uproot trees. Hurricane speed is above 75 m.p.h.

HOW TO INTERPRET CLOUDS

CUMULUS clouds, small and fluffy white in a deep blue sky, indicate fine weather, especially in summer.

CIRRUS clouds—"mares tails" of silky, fibrous, appearance—travel high, are harbingers of clear weather.

HALO around sun or moon generally means rain or snow within 24 or 36 hours. It's one of the surest signs.

CUMULONIMBUS, with summits rising like mountains, generally produce showers, thunder, sometimes hail.

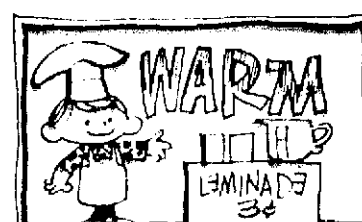

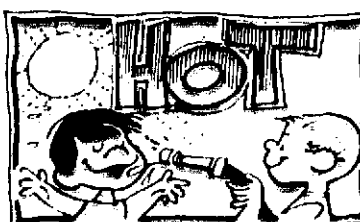

POUFFED cumulonimbus often is associated with violent thunderstorms or tornadoes. It's relatively rare.

...AND HOW TO 'FEEL' A STORM COMING

OLDTIME STORM SIGNALS—unruly curly hair, aching joints or teeth—are really 30 to 50 percent reliable as weather guides. They accompany the humidity (dampness). But many age-old theories have no factual basis. Thus, science says, thick husks on corn, heavy furring of animals, heavy plumage on birds are not omens of a severe winter, but are the results of prior conditions.

TV Notebook

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—It is entirely possible that in another few months people will be identifying the former Sybil Burton as "the wife of Jordan Christopher," instead of the other way around.

When they were married a year ago (their first wedding anniversary will be celebrated on June 13), Jordan was so unknown to everyone (except Sybil) that surprise over the marriage was immediately forgotten in the rush to get information about the young man.

A year later, Jordan has made successful records and two movies. He is still mostly identified as "Sybil Burton's husband," but those on the inside are betting that when his film, "Return of the Seven," is released in the fall, his name will be strong enough to stand alone.

He looks so British and his manners are so quietly refined that it is somehow a shock when he opens his mouth and pure American comes out. He is soft-spoken, gentle and enthusiastic. He seemingly can't be bored, even by the endless waiting actors endure when filming a movie.

"I am having more fun now climbing the ladder. I'm sure, than I will have later when I am an established success," he said.

Jordan Christopher Zankoff was born in Akron, Ohio, 25 years ago. He has always, he says, been interested in both singing and acting. "My father, who owns a restaurant, played three or four instruments by ear. He was also a member of a little theater group and he was very good. At one point he was offered a chance at a Hollywood contract but he turned it down because he had too much responsibility at home."

Jordan first came to New York when he was 18. "I said I would give myself a year to break into show business, and if nothing happened I would return home. At the end of the year, nothing had happened and I announced I would stay for one more year. I knew I was really going to give myself just as long as it took."

His original aim was to be an actor, but he found himself beginning as a singer. "Pretty soon I was working in clubs and it was paying the rent. But it is not very rewarding doing rock 'n' roll songs night after night. I knew I had to do something more."

"We were treated better by the press than we expected," he said. "We were talking just last night, Sybil and I, about what could have been and what was. There was a tremendous gap. I do have one rule, however. I don't read my own publicity. Reading it can get you in a lot of trouble."

In "Return of the Seven," a sequel to "The Magnificent Seven," Jordan plays a Spanish matador. Those who have seen rough cuts of his scenes are very excited about his prospects. (His other film is "The Fat Spy," but it doesn't give him a chance to do much more than sing.) He, himself, is humbly confident.

"If you want to be in show business, you always have to feel that some day you will make it."

Get In The Swim!

Dear Helen: My steady thinks no decent girl would be seen in a two-piece swim suit, yet you should see the way he eyes the wearers.

I don't want him to think I'm vulgar for wearing one but I want to be modern. And still go steady. Will he give me up if I buy one? — To Swim Or Not To Swim

Dear TS or NTS: Ask HIM, Not me!
... And then be a smart little steady and buy the suit that pleases him most. — H.

Dear Helen: The boy I used to know got sent away after he got in trouble with the law. He is home, but now I'm going steady with a real nice guy who has never been in any trouble. We'll call the first boy Mr. X and the second Mr. XX.

Here's my problem. My mother doesn't like Mr. X, but she does like Mr. XX. I'm not sure which one I like best, so I wrote a letter to Mr. X that was quite friendly. My mother intercepted the letter and she said if I saw or talked to him, she would give the letter to Mr. XX who would then ditch me.

Now I'll never know which I really like best because I can't see Mr. X for fear of losing Mr. XX due to my mother. Should I give me a chance to decide for myself? — Parent Trouble

Dear P.T.: Your mother aims well, but her "Pitch" is off-center.

However, YOU haven't been completely honest either, or she couldn't use your letter to Mr. X as a threat.

How about calling it square and conceding that "Mother knows best"? ... Or else break off with Mr. XX until you are sure. And if the thought chills you, well, there is your answer — he's your man. — H.

More Static

Dear Helen: About the girl who gets too much static from cars. The "shock" doesn't hurt you so much as it startles and makes you jump — which can lead to getting hurt. Why not have some fun with it? Hold a key in your hand and let the spark jump from it to a metal part of the car, or if the rug in your home gives you static, let it jump to a doorknob or stove. When you learn it won't hurt, you can take it.

Best thing to do in getting into or out of a car is not to let the static accumulate. Before you slide along the plastic seat, take hold of the metal door handle and hold onto it until you are on the ground and your clothing has completely cleared the seat. It really is fun, though, to release the door handle and then pull your coat off the seat so the static can jump from your

HEAR THESE WORDS

Worship In Church Every Week

The WEAK LINK

Oh, the tragedy of a weak link. For one weak link the great load breaks adrift; for one weak link my car remains in the mud; for one weak link something precious is lost.

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. Life is of a piece... every hour, day, week, month and year counts toward the everlasting. Then, it is very important to form good habits early. Habits of prayer, reverence, church attendance and forbearance... these form the healthful air of human development. These are the strong links of moral living that forge character which will stand strain, stress and trial. These are the good chains, strong chains, useful chains, dependable chains... how priceless they are.

Come! Let us also go to the house of the Lord!

thoughts

Do not add to his words, lest he rebuke you, and you be found a liar.—Proverbs 30:6.

Falsehoods not only disagree with truths, but usually quarrel among themselves.—Daniel Webster, American statesman.

Strive for peace with all men, and for the holiness without which no one will see the Lord.—Hebrews 12:14.

The world will never have lasting peace so long as men reserve for war the finest human qualities. Peace, no less than war, requires idealism and self-sacrifice and a righteous and dynamic faith.—John Foster Dulles, former secretary of state.

The world is divided into people who do things and people who get the credit. Try, if you can, to belong to the first class. There's far less competition.—Dwight Morrow, American lawyer and diplomat.

Words cannot express our thanks and appreciation to our many friends of both races for the prayers, flowers, telegrams, visits, food, help with serving and the many comforting words of sympathy and love. All of these expressions of interest and concern helped us to bear the sorrow at the death of our beloved wife, daughter, and sister.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Upper Denture Can Be Fitted to Cleft Palate

BY WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—I was born with a cleft palate (but no harelip). I was told that I'd never be able to wear a full denture. Now I have a partial denture supported by three remaining teeth. These teeth aren't going to last forever. What will I do when they have to come out? I'm 55 years old.

A—I think you have little to worry about. You can have fitted to your mouth a perfectly satisfactory full upper denture with an obturator attachment to fill the cleft in your palate. However, take the best care of the three teeth you have left. Teeth are excellent anchors for dentures, so keep them as long as you can.

Q—I'd like to know about plastic fillings. Do they outlast porcelain fillings? And do they cost more?

A—Plastic fillings were first introduced in dentistry many years ago. The claims made for them were most attractive, but they never quite lived up to those claims. While plastics can be used in certain repairs, they have characteristics which make them less desirable than synthetic porcelain, amalgam or gold fillings. These character## istics are:

1. Heat caused by rapid setting of plastic fillings can damage the nerve.

2. They have no adhesive qualities.

3. They absorb colors and odors.

4. They're often pitted.

As for cost, they should not cost more than other fillings, perhaps less.

Q—I was interested in your article on taking your dentist into your confidence by telling him about your general physical condition. But how? My dentist doesn't stand still long enough or stop singing and whistling arias from Figaro or Pagliacci. He has three chairs and two nurses and he runs from one room to another. I don't see him long enough to talk to him. How does one cope with such a character?

A—Change dentists.

Please send your questions about dental health to Dr. Lawrence in care of this paper. While he cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in this column.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By JACOB & SON

Here is an unusual type of bridge problem. The game was duplicate and South had no trouble making exactly three no-trump for a top score. It seems that at every other table, North made the same spade overall and for some reason or other South simply raised his partner in spades.

Four spades would be a wrap-up with South as declarer but when East was on lead he opened the ten of diamonds and the defense collected three diamonds and one club with no trouble at all.

South was Mike Thomas of Kansas City. Mike would be one of our top players if his duties with National Steel allowed him to play a lot of bridge. Still he does mighty well when he gets to play.

North was Priscilla Thomas. Priscilla is learning bridge and, as both Jacobys can tell you, in the process of teaching a wife to play bridge the husband takes considerable control in the bidding and tends to work the play around to his hand whenever possible.

Mike's bidding was brilliant. He could count six spade tricks as a no-trump declarer. He had found out that his partner had something in hearts. He was looking at that king of diamonds and knew that if he raised spades, East would lead through it. The result was as good as anyone can hope for. A top score is always a top score. So our problem is: Would Mike have bid the same way with another expert partner?

The really noteworthy feature of the hand is the remark by Priscilla as Mike played his sixth spade. She asked: "Would you have raised me with seven of my suit?"

Blow a Million!

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(NEA)—I stood on the first curve of the infield at the Indianapolis Speedway, with Humpy Wheeler, and watched, within touching distance, a million dollars of sweat and straining metal and screeching tires go up in smoke.

Bits of aluminum and glass fiber flew crazily through the billowy haze, and flat-surfaced tires, looking like inflated steam rollers, spun in every direction, detached from the bodies of the cars.

"The bloody things were coming down from the sky," said Graham Hill, who snaked through the debris and then four hours later was declared the fittest of the survivors, winner of the 50th "500" race.

Cale Yarborough, who has made his big score in stock car racing, was making his debut as a championship car driver at Indy. It lasted approximately 10 seconds.

Cale was quite a high school fullback back home in North Carolina, and what he saw on the track, as cars wheeled across his line of vision, reminded him of carrying the ball through the line.

"The hole opened," said Cale, "and I thought I could get through. But when I got there, it closed."

Cale got out of his car to race another day, same as 10 other drivers in the starting field of 33 who never got past the first turn. And that was the miracle of Indianapolis—nobody hurt except A. J. Foyt, who cut his hand and bruised his knee climbing the 10-foot wire fence to the grandstand after fuel from Al Miller's blazing car drenched him.

After a similar accident two years ago made a pyre of the late Eddie Sachs, new plastic linings were developed for the fuel tanks and probably saved the start of the 1966 race from turning into a holocaust.

The only real damage was financial. A year's investment, amounting to $100,000 a car, $1 million for the lot, flew off with the tufts of smoke hanging over the accident scene. But the way racing is going, there's always more money to swallow up the void.

In the kookie world of pit poppies and decal dollies, a guy's got to be a fiscal expert to understand it's what's happening, baby (lots of times that also goes for football, baseball and the rest).

That's why I had Humpy Wheeler with me on that first turn. His real tag is H. A. Wheeler, and he's a stocky blond who is in charge of Firestone's racing operations in the Southeast, based in Charlotte, N.C.—Firestone being one of the companies peculiarly involved. In other words, from their standpoint, Graham Hill didn't win the race. Firestone did. The company's red trademark was blazoned over the car, on the tires (naturally) and even over Hill's driving costume (a combustible-proof outfit developed by Firestone).

Now Humpy figured out quickly, as the dented gas buggies were dragged from the track, looking like remnants of a soap box derby (they're not much bigger, either), what each one represented:

Engine—Ford, $19-23,000, depending on accessories
Offenhauser, $15-20,000.

Chassis—Gerhardt, Lotus, Lola, $20-23,000.

Miscellaneous parts—suspension, axles, etc., $10-15,000.

Head mechanic (insists on year-round contract) $12,000.

Chassis man (all year)—$10,000.

Three helpers—part time varies.

Driver—Guarantee of at least $10,000, plus percentage of winnings.

In addition, there's the month of maintaining the ensemble in Indianapolis during May, in style. "When those bills come in," says Humpy, "you think you're outfitting a battalion against the Viet Cong."

And it's all a calculated risk.

The owner-partnership of Rolla Vollstedt and Jim Robbins came to Indianapolis with three cars. Two of them got into the race, piloted by Yarborough and Billy Foster, whose car touched off the chain-reaction accident. Both were immediately knocked out of the running. Down the drain in 10 seconds went the concerted result of a whole year's planning and expense and effort.

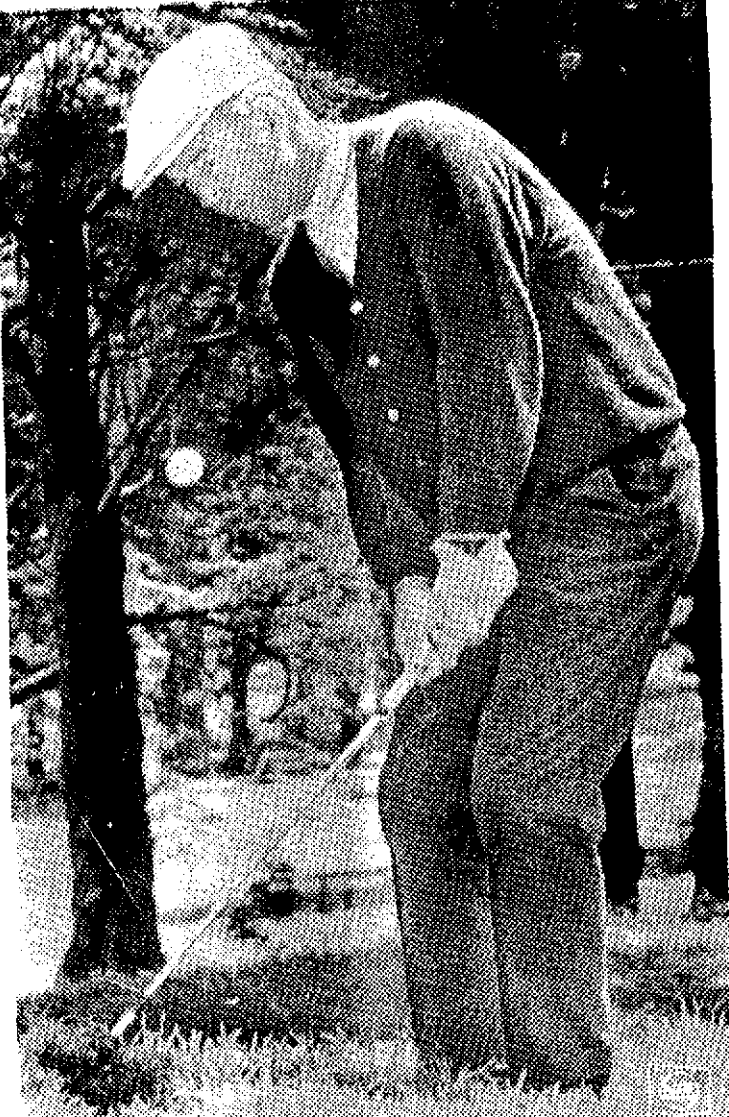

Somewhat I don't feel sorry for them. Before the race I ran into Lamar Hunt, the owner of the Kansas City Chiefs, and he showed me where he was sitting in choice pews overlooking the first corner. I wondered how he rated the treatment.

"I paid $25 a seat for them," he said. "That makes me a sportsman."

HOME, SWEET HOME—Ken Venturi chips from the rough at San Francisco's Olympic Club, site of this year's U.S. Open. But Venturi knows the rough at Olympic. It's his home course.

Matty's older brother, went to the Braves; Jose Cardenal to the Angels; Manny Mota and Jose Pagan to the Pirates; and Orlando Cepeda to the Cardinals.

The nonexpendables in San Francisco are Juan Marichal and Jesus Alou. Tito Fuentes, the rookie infielder, is the other Latin-American on the roster.

As a youngster growing up in the Dominican Republic, Matty was in the same age group as Marichal and Mota.

"The three of us played on the Dominican national team one year," he said. "Now we all live in Santo Domingo. But the people don't root for the Giants as much any more since they traded most of us away," Matty said.

Pirate manager Harry Walker has been platooning Alou and Mota in center field. Matty against the righthanders. Mota against the lefthanders. Other times, Alou has been in center and Mota in left. Mota also can play third and catch.

At one point this season, after the first two months, they were one-two (Mota first, Matty second) in National League batting. Their fielding was equally strong.

So wherever the Pirates go, everyone wants to know what Matty Alou and Manny Mota are doing differently.

Actually, neither have changed their styles radically. "Playing regularly," Alou says. "That is the answer."

It was a little difficult doing that in San Francisco.

This fellow named Mays was the centerfielder there.

CHICAGO—(NEA)—Earlier rains had washed out batting practice, leaving 25 restless members of the Chicago White Sox with two hours before game time.

Some watched television, others played cards while the adventuresome listened to Tony Cuccinello and Ray Berres conduct a songfest.

Berres and Cuccinello are coaches with the White Sox. Between them, they've spent 77 years in baseball as players, managers and coaches.

For the past 17 years, Berres has been the White Sox pitching coach. He has handled all types: the grippers, the hypochondriacs, the plain lazy.

His memories (no names, please) prompted him to an old bullpen song called "The Pitcher's Lament." It is sung to the tune of "Somebody Else Is Taking My Place."

"Somebody else is taking my place,
Somebody else is sharing my disgrace,
My arm is aching, but Stanky thinks I'm jaking,
While he goes around with a frown on his face.

"Little he knows how my arm does ache,
He gives me hell when the curve doesn't break,
My arm is aching, but he thinks I'm jaking,
Now somebody's taking my place."

In another corner, Cuccinello started to sing, "For all we know we may never meet again . . .

And without gambling, Jon Edgar Oppenheim would be back in his cab in Great Neck, L. I., eating hamburgers instead of Chateaubriand.

After 35 Years of Coaching Murray Gets Toughest Job

By SANDY PADWE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DURHAM, N.C.—(NEA)—Some time next fall—perhaps many times—Bill Murray will walk over to his office window and stare quietly at the falling leaves floating sadly to the ground.

Autumn is Bill Murray's season.

Padwe

Some were sad, others glad to see him go. It is that way with all coaches.

Coaching is not an easy profession. Bill Murray—more than others—knows that.

"A coach," he says, "is a volatile, emotional human being. Coaching is his means of expression."

At times, however, in his quest to express himself—especially in the high-pressure game of college football—a coach may go, or be pushed by circumstances, to ugly extremes.

As past chairman of the coaches association committee on ethics, Bill Murray is familiar with the ills of college football.

In his new job, he will not be able to correct them all, but he will be able to exercise a measure of control over the coaches association.

"Wherever you have the intensity of competition," Murray said, "you have problems. There is overzealousness in some quarters and in some situations certain people take advantage. But often the coach is the one who is villified for what happens, deserved or not."

BILL MURRAY

Murray, however, is not a strict adherent to the party line.

Some of his thoughts are rather novel: "I know some of my colleagues wouldn't agree with me, but I think outside pressure on a coach can help him do a better job. It's when the pressure becomes excessive that you have trouble."

Someone should check John Michelosen (formerly of Pitt) and Gomer Jones (formerly of Oklahoma) on that subject.

Since the pressure in college football—at the major level, anyway—usually is excessive, Murray will not have an easy job with the coaches association.

"I'm not too sure we have presented the picture of the coaches as well as we might have," Murray said. "That will be my job."

It will be like casting Elizabeth Taylor in the role of the "Singing Nun."

Baseball's Tops-in-Pops

"That," he said, "is what everybody sings in the shower on the last day of the season."

"Yeh," someone interjected, "and they sing 'After You've Gone' on cut-down day."

One song led to another.

It led to the match game. You match the song with the personality.

"It Had to Be You"—Johnny Keane.

"They Can't Take That Away from Me"—Roger Maris.

"Thou Swell"—Dick Stuart.

"They're Either Too Young or Too Old"—Wes Westrum.

"I'm Beginning to See the Light"—Joe Pepitone.

"Smoke Gets in Your Eyes"—Sam McDowell.

"They Didn't Believe Me"—Birdie Tebbets.

"They're Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine"—Julian Javiera.

"Who's Sorry Now?"—Matty Alou.

"The Song Is Ended but the Melody Lingers On"—Bo Belinsky.

"How Long Has This Been Going On?"—Billy Herman.

"Sunday, Monday or Always"—Stu Miller.

"I Don't Stand a Ghost of a Chance"—Al Dark.

"Georgia on My Mind"—Warren Giles.

And that is how it goes on a rainy night at the ball park.

COLOR HIM A WINNER

How to Succeed

NEW YORK—(NEA)—If $2 million he has collected at the races since August of 1964.

Then the security guards at the nation's racetracks might have some problems.

But Jon Edgar Oppenheim is an unconventional 5-10, 370 pounds with a 20½-inch neck. "So," he said, "there is no way to disguise myself."

Eleven tracks have told Jon he's a nice fellow, but it would be much better for the track, and Jon, if he stayed off the premises.

"There's nothing illegal or dishonest about my system of betting," he said. "What track officials don't like about me is the fact that I win and win big."

It some tracks have disputes with Jon, the Internal Revenue Service doesn't. Oh, he said, they've checked me out. They once drove 400 miles to see me up in Vermont. They had a file as big as I am.

The reason for all the concern, about Jon Edgar, is the with wine.

Of course, he wasn't eating like that all the time, especially before he started betting the horses.

"I've worked as a taxi driver, heavy equipment operator, dog catcher, a drug-store clerk and a delicatessen clerk," he said.

"The delicatessen was the best job. One for them, one for me."

"Before I hit my first twin, I was driving a cab out on Long Island. It's a great way to meet girls."

He doesn't have problems meeting girls now. "I've got over 1,000 proposals of marriage in the mail," Jon said, "and another 500 letters from charming young ladies who offer the promise of extended companionship."

"I was married once," he continued, "to a wonderful girl. But it lasted only 30 days. She came from a very strict religion which didn't allow movies, drinking, let

Theodore Francis Green

Things we liked about Theodore Francis Green, who died last week at the age of 96:

He resigned his position as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when his powers began to fall not very noticeably. Voluntarily giving up a position of importance before one really has to is something few men and fewer politicians are capable of.

He entered the United States Senate when he was 70 years old and proceeded to spend the next 24 years—from 1937 to 1961—there. He was the oldest member ever to serve in Congress. (And if memory serves, he still held his commission as a second lieutenant in the U. S. Army at the time; he had received it in the Spanish-American War.)

He accepted being labeled, another rare quality in politicians. Oftentimes the most predictable, party-lining of that occupational group are the ones most likely to describe themselves as unpredictable non-conformists. Mr. Green called himself a Roosevelt New Dealer — "unless there's a stronger term."

The way he dressed — Senator Green was given to rich fabrics and billowy, breast-pocket handkerchiefs. They complemented his generous nose, generous moustache and modest pince-nez.

The way he thought the most partisan of Democrats, supported the Eisenhower Administration's foreign policy in the spirit of bipartisan unity. And the way he never made much fuss about it.

The way he parted — he was a superb dancer, particularly in his late 80s. He kept it up even when he began to get absent-minded. At one gathering, his hostess caught him peeking in the little black memo book he carried with him. "Are you checking to see where you go next?" she asked, knowing his busy evening schedule. "Oh, no," he assured her. "I'm checking to see where I am now."

The way he felt about automobiles: He used to make the rounds of the parties in Washington in a trolley car. After thoroughly embarrassing his aides by hitching rides for campaign appearances (he would arrive at the most fashionable places in the most dilapidated vehicles) the senator at last gave in to the importunities of his aides with the words "Oh, all right. Go out and buy me one of the things." He seldom used it and steadfastly refused to drive it. Then he had it mounted on blocks in the carriage house behind his mansion, in the way one would lock up a dangerous weapon. He once said that if he were hit by an automobile, he would like "to be carried into court on a stretcher and with my last breath make a dramatic plea for traffic safety." (he was inclined to talk the way he dressed.)

And finally, his explanation for remaining a life-long bachelor, an explanation that is now widely recognized as the World's Second Place performance in that field. "I wait impatiently for each Leap Year," Senator Green would explain. "When it arrives my hopes are high that somebody will speak for me. Then nothing happens, and hope begins to fade."

First Place Honors go, of course, to France's Robert Schuman, the foreign minister after whom a fore-runner of the Common Market, the Schuman Plan, is named. M. Schuman used to explain that he had remained a bachelor because he was looking for the perfect woman. "And you never found her?" people would ask. "Oh, no," he would reply. "I found her, but she was looking for the perfect man."

Beautiful Magnolia Trees at Rose Hill Cemetery Are Not There By Accident

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

Each year when the magnolia trees bloom a special Southern perfume penetrates our nostrils and an easy-living atmosphere captures our being. One almost expects to see ante bellum skirt on local ladies instead of those of rising fashion.

Such was the reaction many felt reoccur during this past month. And when the magnolias are blooming in Hope, some of the prettiest ones to be found are at the Rose Hill Cemetery. This was not by accident but the result of careful planning.

Many years ago Mr. and Mrs. George Prall moved to Hope from Virginia. Like another well-known couple of today, they were George and Effie. However, it is doubtful if first-name familiarity was used by many for them because they were of the aristocratic, Old South generation when things like that weren't done.

Talented and well-trained in the field of art, Mrs. Prall shared her abilities with others. More than one promising young artist in Hope found inspiration and encouragement as well as instruction from Mrs. Prall. One such person was Mrs. Dolph Carrigan who now lives at 320 South Pipe.

Mrs. Prall was manager of the handle mill here, and they lived on the corner of North Main and West Avenue C. They were the parents of several children. But what about the magnolia trees?

Mrs. Prall recognized the possibilities for growing beauty if magnolia trees were planted at Rose Hill. What could she do about it personally? She could do handwork on china, a friend told her. The friend was anxious to purchase it, and with the money the talented Mrs. Prall could buy magnolia trees for the cemetery project. That is just what she did, painting two plates and planting two trees each year.

The beautiful results of the lovely magnolias are seen and enjoyed by one and all. In addition to this living memorial to the lady from Virginia there are several of her works of art owned by local people and highly prized by them. These include paintings and the hand-painted china. Mrs. Prall had two kilns for this latter work. One was a charcoal kiln in her fireplace and the other was a coal oil kiln.

Her works were signed "E. L. Prall," and we viewed a charming vase with this inscription recently at the home of J. A. "Red" Kennedy. It was a small-necked blue vase six or eight inches tall decorated with pink roses on its balloon-like frame. He is looking for more of her china and would be particularly please to find a match for this vase.

Are you one of the lucky people with an E. L. Prall signature on a piece of art? You may be, but all of us see the touch of her hand in God's when the magnolias bloom.

Tornadoes Being Studied by the U. S.

By LARRY PHIPPS

NORMAN, Okla., (AP) — Buildings blasted apart like playing-card houses. Trees broken like discarded match sticks. Homes and lives shattered in a few moments of uncontrolled violence.

Such scenes are created throughout the Midwest and Southwest each year by one of nature's most dreaded excesses — the tornadoes which can spew from almost any severe thunderstorm.

Nothing known to man can control the ravages of the killer winds — but greater knowledge of the forces which generate the twisters' deadly vortex is saving more lives each year.

The United States, using facilities centered in the university city of Norman, is in the sixth year of an ambitious study of thunderstorms, squall lines and tornadoes.

The studies at the Norman Severe Storms Laboratory already have led to improved predictions which weather experts are using to give advance notice of threatening storm systems.

The tools of the study are many — ground-based radar systems, balloon-borne radio devices, visual sightings, and reports from airplanes which fly into, around and over the storms.

Piloted by Air Force Maj. R. J. Vanden-Heuvel, one of the key pieces of this year's study is an especially equipped F100 Sabre Jet fighter plane from Wright-Patterson Air Force Base at Dayton, Ohio.

Maj. Vanden-Heuvel is a member of the select group called "Rough Riders," men who ride the wild winds of storm systems.

"There isn't a man in my unit who wouldn't like the chance to do what I'm doing," the youthful-appearing major said. "Other pilots are ordered not to get too close to storms — they let me fly right into them."

Guided by radar-watch teams on the ground, Vanden-Heuvel makes repeated runs through developing storms.

The equipment packed into the nose and cockpit of the plane is used to collect and monitor the forces and atmospheric conditions.

The major is operating under some strict limits because a pilot last year flew into a storm bearing baseball-sized hail.

Frank Dechirico, in charge of maintenance of the Rough Rider aircraft, said the bullet-proof glass on the cockpit was shattered.

tered, there were giant holes in the wings and body and pieces of the wing cover peeled off. "I've been in combat situations, and I've never seen an airplane come back damaged like that plane," he said.

In addition to the Rough Rider flights, an equipment-weighted DC6 will fly around the storms to record peripheral information while a U2 flies over the tops of the storms, which observers say can shoot up thousands of feet in a minute's time.

"No one knows how fast the circular winds in a tornado blow," said Gene Lee, coordinator of aircraft study at the lab in Norman.

"We've never been able to get a direct reading on the winds of a twister," Lee said. "Our airplanes can and do fly into hurricanes, but hurricanes have straight winds and seldom blow over 100 miles an hour."

"Tornadoes have vicious circular winds which we think can blow 200 to 500 miles an hour."

The study will wind up sometime in June, since this is the period of greatest tornado activity, although twisters have been known to occur any time of the year.

Dr. William Kessler, director of the lab, calls his station — located in what has become known as "Tornado Alley" — the ideal spot.

"No other country has severe storms like the United States," he said. "We just couldn't have picked a better place."

Tornadoes are most frequent in northern Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri. Records show that tornadoes have claimed an average 197 lives a year over the past 48 years.

During their most frightful blow, tornadoes killed 699 persons in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana on a terrifying sweep on March 18, 1925.

From 1875 through 1965, records show 1,432 tornadoes in Oklahoma, with 1,076 persons killed. The most deadly storm to strike Oklahoma passed over Ellis and Woodward counties on April 8, 1947.

Cutting a swath with ranged up to two miles in width, and hitting portions of Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas, the storm struck Woodward, in western Oklahoma.

It killed 101 persons and injured 782 others.

With a sound like a n express train, tornadoes form a funnel-shaped cloud which stretches to the ground in its most destructive force.

The powerful winds, combined with changes in air pressure which can burst buildings as though a bomb had gone off inside form a threat which can be avoided only by taking cover in reinforced structures, such as storm shelters or inside strong buildings.

The weather experts say that their greatest hope is to increase the margin of safety for persons in the path of tornadoes by giving them enough advance warning to allow them to seek shelter before the storm strikes.

Wynne to Vote on Plant Bonds

WYNNE, Ark. (AP) — Voters at Wynne decide July 1 whether to issue $2.5 million in Act 9 revenue bonds to build a plant for Halstead Mitchell Corp.

The firm makes industrial and business air conditioning equipment. It is a subsidiary of Halstead Metal Products, which operates a copper extrusion plant at Wynne.

Of the proposed bond issue, $1.5 million would be used to retire existing bonds and $1 million would be used to finance construction of a 142,000-square foot plant for Halstead Mitchell Corp.

West Thinks War Signs Are Fading

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — People huddle together in shock and terror but go their own way again when the sun shines. The Western world, which huddled after the last war, is showing signs it thinks the sun is out.

Twenty years ago it would not have been far fetched to think of a union of the Atlantic nations including the United States, to provide a common interest and a common defense to protect it.

They had learned from Hitler what lack of unity could mean. By the idea would never have been very real. The United States, whose territory was unscathed by the war, would never have yielded its sovereignty to some Western union.

The attitude of the United States might have been different if it had been devastated by bombing as Europe was.

The closest the Atlantic powers came to real unity was in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, including the United States, as a defense against Russian attack.

Meanwhile, the east Europeans had no choice. They had suffered the full impact of the war and were scooped up by Stalin and put in the Russian bag as satellites.

Yet, just as in the West, each treasured its own individuality, called nationalism and, instead of immediately absorbing them, Russia let each have its own government, provided it was Communist.

Eventually, in 1955, Russia formed a counterpart of NATO by forming the Warsaw pact, a military alliance made up of Russia and the satellites. So now there were two groups of huddlers: East and West under a military shield.

Both sides began to relax a bit as the shock and terror of the war retreated from memory and they began to get back on their feet and prospered. Fear and suspicion remain on both sides, but less intensely.

And the result was predictable. As each nation, East and West, began to feel a little less dependent on its neighbors, that old story which has plagued history, nationalism, began to tell itself again.

France is the best example of it under President Charles de Gaulle who, saying times have changed, rocked NATO by deciding to null his troops out from under his command.

Inevitably other NATO partners will assert their own nationalism more and more, in different ways, as time passes. But the relaxed mood settling over Western Europe has begun to have its effect in the Communist world.

Romania called for the abolition of all military alliances and the withdrawal of troops from foreign soil, which was a way of telling the Russians to get back where they belong.

None of the other satellites has been as outspoken or restless as Romania although it can only be a matter of time before they are, unless East-West animosities tense up again.

But time moves slowly and the Western world — eastern Europe is included here — is still divided into two blocs. This is frustrating for both and it is impossible, because of the evolutionary process of history, to believe this condition can remain frozen another 20 years.

The proof is that Communism in Europe, like capitalism, has been in this evolutionary process right along and will wind up, like capitalism, unrecognizable by its early prophets. Right now we are just looking at the slim beginnings.

Paratroopers Regroup for New Assaults

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. paratroopers regrouped today for fresh assaults on entrenched North Vietnamese regulars who already have lost nearly 400 men in the jungled central highlands.

While ground fighting subsided to isolated skirmishes during the day, B2 bombers pounded a Communist troop are only 10 miles north of the battle area.

The B2 strikes were made before dawn to support ground units of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division which has locked with at least two battalions of North Vietnamese Army regulars since Tuesday.

A U.S. military spokesman said there had been sightings of at least two more Communist battalions in recent days in the B2 target area. He said the target was a suspected site for North Vietnamese reserve forces and supplies.

Capt. Bill Carpenter, a hero of the paratroopers ground fighting 30 miles northwest of Kontum City, was reported to have led survivors of his company to safety during the day.

Carpenter, the West Point football star who was the "Jonesome end" of the 1959 West Point football team, had called in a Napalm air strike on his own position Thursday when his company was being overrun by North Vietnamese.

The spokesman said that as of late this afternoon the North Vietnamese dead totaled 385, an increase of more than 100 over the previous official figure.

The official spokesman gave this summary of the situation on the battlefield 280 miles north of Saigon:

"There are two confirmed battalions of North Vietnamese regulars dug in along moderate steep ridges, heavily covered by underbrush which is chiefly bamboo thickets."

"U.S. and ARVN (South Vietnamese) forces are in positions all around the general area. Because of the broken nature of the terrain it is not accurate to describe this as surrounding the enemy."

The spokesman said American casualties continued light over-all, although several individual units suffered moderate or heavy losses.

The battle could have large military significance. With two and possibly four North Vietnamese battalions badly mauled, it could upset the timetable for any Communist monsoon offensive against the central highlands.

The highlands long have been a Red objective and at least six regiments of North Vietnamese were known to be poised just across the border in Laos.

Throughout the fighting of the past few days, U.S. planes flew 202 air strikes against the entrenched North Vietnamese. Some of the strikes were close to American ground forces and the spokesman said one strike today was within 50 yards of the paratroopers.

Big Selection for Man in U.S.—There Are 8½ Million Widows, 2 Million Divorcees

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Man, if you're looking for a marriage partner, there are a lot of veterans available. The nation now has some 8½ million widows and more than 2 million divorcees.

Forget any dreams you have of discovering a valuable pearl in a restaurant oyster. Pearls found in that kind of bivalve aren't of gem quality, and have nothing but curiosity value.

Asphalt Price Fixing Charged

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A proposal will be filed with the Legislative Council next Friday asking that it investigate charges of price fixing in the sale of asphalt to the state.

Rep. Nathan Schoenfeld of Garland County issued his proposal Thursday, asking that the council subpoena public officials and officers of six asphalt companies and all records and documents that could help the council in an investigation.

Schoenfeld proposed an open hearing to determine whether a conspiracy existed between the companies doing business in Arkansas.

A Highway Commission investigation into the matter last month uncovered evidence of conspiracy and price fixing, the commission said.

Geography Big Part of Business Now

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who is going places in business today is going places geographically, too.

Twenty years of economic expansion have set off an industrial migration, the saga of the corporate gypsy — men like Lamon M. Cruse, 30, assistant to the president of Burlington Hosiery Co. in New York City. Cruse, a native of Harrison, Tenn., has moved eight times in nine years.

Over half of the nation's population moved between 1955 and 1960, and the rate has been increasing.

Many moves are set off when dad is transferred.

"Lots of companies are expanding along with the economy, so there are more plants located at places where people never considered moving before," Cruse said.

"It's becoming the thing of the future," he said. "Rootless executives. Younger men are much more mobile than ever, and probably will continue that way for a long time to come."

Western Electric Co. Inc., which has 157,800 employees, estimates it will transfer 1,800 of them this year — 300 to 500 more than normal — to man its new regional centers.

"People get in the pattern of transfers," said Clifton C. Field Jr. of Western Electric. "Many people are permanent transients, and there will be more and more. With companies demoralizing, transfers are inevitable."

Field said that generally there was more resistance to transfers from older employees who never have moved. Virtually no one wants to move when he has children in high school, Field said.

Mich., is a keep-America-beautiful fan. To each of the 73 couples he married last year he gave three litterbags inscribed: "Don't throw your trash all over hell."

There is a controversy raging over whether God is dead. If He is, it is news to most Americans. According to the Catholic Digest magazine, polls show that 97 per cent of adult Americans believe in God. But in 1952, the magazine adds the figure was 99 per cent.

Alcoholics aren't born. They're made. Researchers believe the disease takes from 15 to 20 or more years to develop and that it can shorten life expectancy from 10 to 20 years.

FRIGHTENING FACT: Washington, D.C., is reported to have more psychiatrists in proportion to its population than any other city in the United States.

WORTH REMEMBERING: The trouble with most of us is that we'd rather be ruined by praise than saved by criticism.

Civil Rights Groups Plan New Tactics

BATESVILLE, Miss. (AP) — While a foot weary procession plods southward through Mississippi, civil rights groups from coast-to-coast today planned vocal and walking support to the cause now known as James Meredith's march against fear.

The march pace will be slowed a little through a new tactic. Instead of sticking to U. S. 51, which only brushes the outskirts of towns, the marchers will go into county seats to escort Negroes to voter registration places.

Meredith, the first Negro at the University of Mississippi, walked for two days from the Tennessee line toward Jackson, the state capital, before he was wounded by two blasts of birdshot. Others took over where he left off and their number has varied from 125 to 600.

Meredith set out on his walk to encourage Negroes to register.

In support of the marchers, civil rights workers in Phoenix, Ariz.; Louisville, Ky.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Nashville, Tenn.; Los Angeles; Chicago; Albany, N.Y.; San Antonio, Tex. and throughout Louisiana scheduled rallies and marches today or Sunday.

Some groups coupled the affairs with voter registration support and memorial services for Medgar Evers, state field secretary of the Mississippi chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who was shot to death three years ago.

Charles Evers, the slain man's brother, is to preside over a service and march over the funeral route Sunday in Jackson. Floyd McKissick, director of the Congress of Racial Equality, plans to leave the Meredith march to attend the service.

A call for marchers from other states promised to lengthen the procession.

Meredith, a law student at Columbia University in New York, is expected to march again when he recovers from his wounds. The man accused of shooting him, Aubrey J. Norvell, 40, of Memphis, is jailed at Harnand, Miss., in lieu of $25,000 bond.

The marchers spent the night in homes of Negroes in Batesville and in a church — the first time they have not returned to Memphis, which now is 60 miles to the north.

1st Medicare Premium Notices

First medicare premium notices are in the mail to more than 2 million of the elderly people who signed up for the voluntary doctor bill insurance to supplement their basic hospital insurance under medicare, Otis A. Blackwood, Texarkana District Social Security Manager, announced today.

Another 15 million older people who enrolled for the doctor bill insurance will not receive premium notices Blackwood said. Their $3 premiums will be deducted from their monthly social security, railroad retirement, or civil service benefit checks, beginning with the checks due in early July. Also a number of States will be paying the premiums for their old age assistance recipients.

The premium notices now being delivered call for quarterly payments of $9, covering premiums for the months of July, August, and September. The punch card premium notice should be returned in the pre-addressed envelope with the payment. Payment should be made by check or money order payable to "Social Security Medical Insurance."

Older persons who cannot manage to make the quarterly premium payment of $9 may send in a payment of $6 for two months coverage or $3 for one month, Blackwood said. Or if they have any questions about the premium payments, they may get in touch with their social security district office. The Texarkana District office is located at 121 College Drive. Premium payments for medical insurance are due on or before the first day of each month of coverage, he pointed out.
